

MINERS CONFER ON U. S. ORDER TO END STRIKE

ARTICLE 10 IS HUB OF DISCUSSION OF TREATY IN CONGRESS

OPPOSING Factions in Ratification Fight Line Up for Struggle.

TO HURRY VOTE?

G. O. P. Leaders May Take Action to Curtail Debate on League.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Washington, Nov. 10.—With apparently little change in the program of procedure developed over the week-end, despite increasing pressure from members who desire early final action so they might have a recess before the regular session of congress begins, the two opposing factions in the peace treaty ratification fight lined up today for a continuation of the struggle over reservations.

Today's contest, revolved around the reservation relating to article 10 of the League of Nations' constitution which was recommended by the foreign relations committee and which the administration senators desired most of all to defeat.

The only step discussed today that might hasten consideration of the treaty was the proposal of a number of leaders might propose adjournment to curtail the protracted debate. In this plan they were said to be supported by a number of democrats.

Resolution Changed, but Little.

"The United States assures no obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country or to interfere in controversies between nations, whether members of the league or not, under the provisions of article 10, or to employ military or naval forces of the United States under any article of the treaty for any purpose, unless, in any particular case, the congress, which under the constitution has the sole power to declare war or authorize the employment of the military or naval forces of the United States, shall by act of joint resolution so provide."

Many Amendments Prepared.

Numerous amendments had been prepared by senators who had agreed to make the provisions more domestic and acceptable, debate was expected, but leaders hoped for a final roll-call before adjournment tonight.

CO-EDS LEARN TRICKS OF LIVE-SAVING CORPS

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Co-eds at Northwestern university have organized a life-saving corps and will have their first drill in the gymnasium this evening. The 40 young women who have enrolled in the corps are to be trained for the purpose of replacing male life guards at the lake beaches next summer.

Before they can be admitted into the corps, girls must qualify in the swimming tests:

Swim 40 yards clothed in blouse, skirt and shoes; dispose in the water, swim eighty yards more.

Swim a person ten yards.

Retrieve a 10 pound weight from the grip of the storm.

Full a person of equal weight out of the tank.

ON HUNTERS TAKE FALL INTO LOST CAVE

Poplar Bluff, Mo.—While hunting six miles east of Poplar Bluff two boys discovered what is thought to be the "Lost Cave," for which it is declared, Indians searched in vain for years.

The ground gave way under the boys when they were chasing a rabbit and they fell many feet into the cave.

An exploring party which spent several hours in the cave said they were nearly two miles back through passages very steeply shaped and failed to reach the end. A stream of deep, swift water runs through the cave and disappears through a hole near the entrance.

TWO THOUSAND VETS ATTEND MEETING OF AMERICAN LEGION

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Minneapolis, Nov. 10.—To give the American Legion permanent shape and declare its policies as a force in the social and governmental life of the nation, two thousand delegates representing all branches of the service, men and women, started their first convention here today. Governor Burnquist, President Cyrus Northrup of the University of Minnesota, and Mayor J. E. Meyers delivered speeches at the opening session this morning, which was called to honor General D. L. Lindsey, Texas, national chairman.

Discussion of candidates for national officers with at least a dozen prominently mentioned for first national head of the legion has brought an empirical refusal from a number of delegates.

"When I say no I mean no," declared Theo. Roosevelt, one of the delegates from New York, when his candidacy was mentioned. Others receiving support from their state delegations included General D. L. Lindsey, Texas; Col. Benson W. Hough, Ohio, and Thomas S. Wolley, Louisiana.

With a mass of decisions affecting organization to be made at the first convention, it is to be given to a selection of committees and a tentative program prepared by an advance committee of state officers for submission to the first session. With Tuesday devoted almost entirely to celebration, the American Legion's Wednesday sessions are expected to prove busy ones for the delegates.

Mayor Meyers, Minneapolis, has proclaimed a city holiday Tuesday, asking that all possible working men and women be released to join with the veterans in observing the first anniversary of the cessation of fighting in the great war.

Except for the amendment of one article, the reservation to article 10 is the same as that which President Wilson declared during his western trip he would regard as a rejection of the treaty.

It text follows:

"The United States assures no obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country or to interfere in controversies between nations, whether members of the league or not, under the provisions of article 10, or to employ military or naval forces of the United States under any article of the treaty for any purpose, unless, in any particular case, the congress, which under the constitution has the sole power to declare war or authorize the employment of the military or naval forces of the United States, shall by act of joint resolution so provide."

Why Does a Woodpecker Peck
By Adelia Belle Bearl

If you can get near enough to a Woodpecker when he is pecking steadily at one spot on a tree, or if you have a pair of opera or field-glasses through which to watch him, you will see for yourself why he pecks. He does not do it for the fun of the thing you may be sure, though no doubt he enjoys his skill in searching his dinner by his own peculiar method.

And that is why the Woodpecker pecks. He likes that he may eat and he eats the wood-boring insects that destroy the fruit and forest trees so he is pecking in your interest and mine as well as his own. He also pecks to enlarge—or make—a hole where he can put his nest.

The hungry, little worker has three perfect tools always ready for use. First there are his very keen ears, which hear without fail exactly where to find the grub or the wood-boring beetle and its larvae hidden away in the wood under the bark. Next he has a beak which is a perfect, little chisel, wedge-shaped at the tip, strong and sharp. This he uses to drill a hole directly over the insect his ears have located; a hole that looks as if made by a gimlet. The last of his three tools is his tongue and a most remarkable tongue it proves to be. It is very long and stretches far beyond the point of his beak. The tip is hard and horny and is provided with hooks slanting backward like those on a harpoon.

The long tongue the Woodpecker uses to thrust down into the small deep hole he has excavated (he could never get his beak into it) and to drag out on its hooks the juicy grub, or other insect, which is darting on the life of the tree.

Do you know how many varieties of Woodpeckers are found in your state? Can you name them?

Clark Was So Run Down And Nervous—Gains Eighteen Pounds Talking Tanlac

"I know Tanlac is something extraordinary because it has restored me to health after everything else failed," was the statement made by E. E. Clark of 1200 Chestnut Ave. North, Minneapolis, Minn., to a Tanlac representative recently. For twelve years Mr. Clark was a well known and highly respected harness maker in Minneapolis, but he is retired now.

"I suffered from a general run down condition which had been brought on by a severe attack of the 'flu,'" continued Mr. Clark. "It left me in a very weakened condition and kept me confined to the house from December, last, until the middle of June. I was so weak to even start to do any work, and when I would walk around the house a little I would become so exhausted I would almost fall over. I was so nervous at times I was afraid to shave myself, and finally I had to cut altogether. I had trouble with gas forming on my stomach, and with a peculiar flutter just under the heart. At one time I had awful pains, especially across my chest, and for three weeks I had to sit up every night in a chair. I lost in weight rapidly, going from one hundred and ninety-eight to one hundred and forty-five, an actual loss of fifty-three pounds. I tried all kinds of medicines and treatments but got only temporary relief.

"A friend of mine noticed about Tanlac in a Davenport, Iowa, paper, tried it and improved wonderfully and advised me to take it. Well, sir, I began to get better on my first bottle but I thought it would be only temporary just like I had gotten from all the other medicines I had tried; but not a bit of it—I kept on improving until now I've taken three bottles and feel like a different man entirely. Tanlac built up my strength and nerves, until now I've gained eighteen pounds and can shave myself without being the least bit nervous. I'm not troubled with gas any more, and don't have any pains across my stomach or chest at all. I feel half and heartly all the time and can eat anything I want, in fact I can hardly get enough to eat. I take a long walk in the morning and one in the afternoon, late, and when I get back home I don't feel tired. Tanlac has certainly lived up to its reputation and I'm glad to endorse it."

TANLAC is sold in Janesville by all leading druggists.—Adv.

If a leaf is torn, cut a piece of thin onion skin paper one half an inch wide and the length of the tear and apply it by means of a good library paste to the tear. Put a piece of oiled paper under the page when mending so that no paste will get through to the next page.

For paper mending make a hinge of a good brand of paper one inch wide and the length of the page. Fold the paper lengthwise. Put library paste on one half of the folded paper and apply to loose page. Be sure that the folded edge of the paper is next to the inner edge of the page. Then paste the other side in book. So when the page is put in evenly, if it protrudes beyond the other pages trim neatly.

A FEW LINES ON LIONS.

The lion that rages through our architecture is a unique creature. It is temperamental, too, and takes on the character and mood of its surroundings in a truly remarkable way.

For instance, the lions in front of the New York Library on Fifth Avenue express the essence of the super sophistication and superciliousness peculiar to that thoroughfare. Each lies poised and composed upon his pedestal and glances disdainfully down his aristocratic nose at the passers-by. As one outspoke child remarked, they look as if Fifth Avenue didn't smell nice to them.

The beautiful bronze lions that guard the entrance to the Corcoran Art gallery in Washington embody the withdrawn mood which distinguishes the capital from any other American city. One of these animals is particularly interesting when it is glaring fiercely at the world. Of course one reason why they may seem withdrawn may be that they are copies of the bronze lions of Canova which guard Pope Clement's tomb in Rome, and naturally they do not feel quite at home in America.

Probably the most typical of all lions are the smooth-backed pair standing in the lobby of the Chicago Art Institute. They are certainly the hardest worked. Their tails curve out behind them, forming convenient seats upon which practically every student of the art institute has at some time been photographed.

SAMPICA STORE

When C. M. Sampica opened his tailoring shop at 319 West Milwaukee street at 7 o'clock this morning he found an employee missing in addition to $340 in cash and clothing to-wear: $200 in cash, 1 suit, 1 black overcoat, 1 cap, 1 razor.

The robbery was at once reported to the police station and an investigation by Chief Morrissey followed with the result that a warrant was sworn out for the arrest for a tailor who had been working for Sampica for the past four months. Chicago police were notified to arrest the man and information was sent to his home town, New Orleans, La.

The employee pressed clothes in the shop yesterday afternoon but was not seen after 7 o'clock last night. It is presumed by the police that he left for Chicago early in the evening with nothing known of the robbery until this morning. It is the second theft experienced by the Sampica tailors within a year.

Antigo—The Red River Manufacturing company, whose plant at Phillips was destroyed by fire Tuesday, will rebuild on a larger scale as soon as possible. The loss, estimated at from $12,000 to $15,000, is partly covered by insurance. Logging operations of the company will continue without interruption.

Yond Wilson than there are on Milwaukee street, but you got to make a different town of this. You got to make the main streets nice and quiet and awfully safe, so we'll never have to look when we start around town for parking places. There's plenty of room for parking down behind Bostwick's and up to the fair grounds. Nobody's time ain't worth much walking back and forth. Besides, if we won't farmers don't like it, we can go to some other village for buying same as we do when we want groceries on Wednesday afternoon.

P. S. Just read Janesville Citizen's letter in the paper. Good for him. You got to stop them horseless carriages all along the main streets. You got to make them streets safe so that we can walk across them anywhere, without bothering other people. Get the horses off the streets, then we'll feel to home so that we'll come in and do our trading. We don't care if we have to leave the old Ford down to the pumping station cause may and I still got six kids to home, so each time we get a bundle of laundry, we'll stop, get the young ones down to the car with it, course, reckon there would be a lot of trotting back and forth for some folks, but then, a farmer's time ain't worth much.

Did you ever go down to that rip-roaring place, Bostwick's Gold-diggin', that's the worst mess I ever got into. Seems just like they're a fire and a circus in town all the time, and a million folks just got the telegram to hurry home and are tryin' to walk over you, and they're horses and trucks a-riarin' and roarin' all over the place, to get a chance to cross the life out of you. Well, you folks down there in Janesville, I'm told, are going to have a city just like that if you don't look out, so now's your chance to start things right, and show them Chicago folks they're not all wrong, and that they're in too much of a hurry to leave their autos out on Wilson Avenue and walk to Randolph and by cracky they're more autos out because it's the last day of the month.

"GLORIFIED" PATCHES.

Municipal employees in Chicago who have organized the "Old Clothes Society" may be putting into practice a conception of economic worth. More likely they are not.

The news dispatch telling of the organization to "glorify the wearing of patches, frayed or shiny suits, soft collars, resoled shoes and revivified neckties" carries a disquieting intimation. We read between the lines a declaration of boycott which, widely practiced, would have a disastrous effect on American industry.

Thrift, it appears, is to be employed as a weapon; it should be practiced as a virtue if it is to be generally or individually beneficial. We are to see defiance of conventions, premeditated and enforced through the power of union. That is the weakness of the rising cult of shabbiness that will defeat whatever is laudable in the object of the "Old Clothes Society."

Economically this scheme will defeat itself through increasing idleness and slowing up the production of wealth on which every member of society depends for prosperity. In essence this Chicago plan contemplates a species of sabotage, whereas what is essential is genuine economy, elimination of extravagance and waste, but the continued supply of all needs.

True thrift is not miserliness. Saving is commendable only when it is wisely accomplished.

THAT PRINTERS' STRIKE.

Because the printers of the large publishing houses in New York struck for less working hours and more money, one magazine at least is publishing weekly without the aid of printers. And other publications are promising to follow suit.

It is said that "necessity is the mother of invention," and it may be in this case.

Composition is ever the big end of anything printed. Newspapers have had this bugaboo for years until they have had to pass along to the advertisers the cost of the printing of the editions. If a way may be found to issue publications without the use of so much typeset, then the world will have cheaper newspapers, magazines and books. It will be an invention worth while.

Just how the magazines are getting along without printers is no puzzle to the publishing men, though it has been used seldom in the past. The method is simple and consists of photographing a page of typewritten material, making a cut of the photograph, and printing from this cut. Naturally the pages are simply of typewritten copy, similar to a well-written letter. But the cost is much less, and the labor and time saved is enormous.

Besides this step in advance in the art of printing, the strike of the printers may mean the removal of some of the biggest magazines from New York to inland cities. This will do away with New York's "corner" on the publishing business and will mean much to literary men and women. It will mean a different viewpoint for the magazines, also, which, in the past, have thought New York the center of all things important in the country.

OUR SOLDIER STUDENTS ABROAD.

One of the most interesting chapters of the story of our troops' stay abroad, apart from the record of the spectacular fighting, relates to the residence of our young soldiers at English universities. When our military authorities first suggested the scheme they scarcely realized the comparable inadequacy of the accommodations that were available. Asked how many soldier students they wished to send, they replied about 30,000. This was about double the normal number of students at British universities. Finally it was agreed to take some 8,000, and drastic revision of the names brought the number down to 2,000. Of these about 200 went to Cambridge. The other day when the retiring vice-chancellor of that university officially recounted the history of the last academic year he had much to say about the American visitors and the splendid manner in which they acquitted themselves amid unaccustomed surroundings.

It is gratifying but not surprising to hear that our young men speedily entered into the university life about them and took a leading part in every activity. Some proved such good sportsmen as to be chosen members of their college crews. Cambridge university is composed of a number of colleges which compete keenly in athletics of all kinds.

"Socially," we are told, "the American students proved themselves a great success. They were very popular with the undergraduates whose acquaintances they made and they were popular also with the private citizens."

A record of their achievements in scholarship is not available because they did not take examinations, but their industry and earnestness were generally commended. A London newspaper remarks that "following their own system at home, they combined subjects which to the ordinary English student seemed quite incompatible: for example in successive hours such disparate subjects as chemistry and classics."

Even though they did not take examinations, our students were granted a special certificate testifying to the work they had done. The English papers have a good deal to say about the benefits conferred on our youths by their temporary residence in the old universities, but may it not be that the advantages were not all one-sided and that the American invasion, like the Rhodes scholarship scheme, had a wholesome and stimulating effect on their grave and reverend hosts?

BECAUSE OF HIS DISLOYALTY.

Socialists are saying that the recommendation of the house committee to exclude Representative-elect Victor L. Berger is due to the fact that he is a leader of their party, for which republicans and democrats have no use. They assert that were he a member of either of the other parties different action might have been taken.

It is true that by the declarations of its St. Louis platform, after our country had entered the war against Germany, the socialist party of the United States expressly pledged itself to interfere with the government's program in every way possible. The socialists resolved not to bear arms, not to contribute to the financial support of the war, not to aid in the making of munitions, and even proclaimed it the duty of socialists to obstruct the operations of our fighting forces whenever they could.

No more treasonable utterance was ever made with impunity. Why our government did not immediately proceed against the authors of the proclamation as traitors has never been explained. Probably it was desired to avoid the appearance of political persecution, but this charge could not have been brought with justice. No political consideration was involved. The socialists of France, of Italy, of Germany were supporting their respective governments in the war. Only in the United States did the socialists place themselves thus boldly in opposition to their government.

Do not all Christian doctrines plan

But the adverse report of the house committee was not due to Mr. Berger's political affiliations, but to his individual utterances, which it has characterized as disorderly and for which he is now under criminal conviction. In 1911, when he was elected to congress as a socialist, no objection was made to his taking his seat. In 1915 Representative Meyer London of New York took his seat in congress as a socialist. "The only question of fact at issue in this case was whether or not Victor L. Berger was disloyal to the United States during the war and gave aid and comfort to its enemies." So says the committee, finding in the affirmative. And its decision is approved by all patriotic citizens.

The German agent who has been sentenced by the Canadian courts to ten years' imprisonment for attempting to blow up a railroad bridge, says he will appeal to the "Fatherland" against his sentence. By this time he should be aware that the wishes of the "Fatherland" have no great influence in most parts of the world.

It is bad enough to have to pay the present prices for butter but a much more sorrowful fact is that as the price has increased the average quality has decreased so that really first-class butter seems to be no longer produced by the creameries and can be obtained only now and then by great good fortune from a private dairy.—Wausau Record-Herald.

He found that he weighed four pounds less than before he began his six-day walk.—During the services at the African Methodist church last night, two or three became unruly and had to be rolled out. TWENTY YEARS AGO

Nov. 10, 1899.—There are a few cases of diphtheria in the city, but they are not of a nature serious enough to cause alarm. It is becoming serious in Beloit and some of the local doctors are of the opinion that there are some cases here that are being suppressed.—Waukesha Cochrane was in Stoughton today on business.

SPEAKING OF GLANDS.
If I were 65
Years of age and had worked
Many years to kill my life
Trying to make a living and had
Been spending all my time trying
To keep one jump ahead
Of the profiteers—
I say, if I were 65
Years of age and had brought up
A family of children
And had spent most of those years
Lugging home the salary envelope
And dodging bill collectors
And dodging automobiles
And explosions and hold-up men—
I say, if I were 65
Years of age and was just Getting ready to bid farewell
To this old earth and to Enjoy a well-earned vacation
Somewhere—no matter where
It might be—and
Some meddling interfering,
Presumptuous scientist,
Should you try to reform me
And catch some young trappy ape
And remove his interstitial gland
And graft it into my person
And set me back 50 years
And make me feel young
And make me start the whole program
All over again—
The first thing I would do
Would be to hunt up that
Scientist and tap him
Gently but firmly on the bean
With a bright new axe.

Stevens Point.—The city council adopted a motion closing up all billiard halls, fruit stands and movie picture theaters and all places of business selling soft drinks. The order was a retaliatory measure following adoption of a motion that saloons of the city must be closed on Sunday as long as they operate under the new law.

The solution, it is suggested, by several students of the problem, is for the publishers to build their own mills. The timber they need exists in Washington and Alaska, and the forests of the Northwest are dense. It is said that 20 to 80 tons of wood may be cut to the acre, and enough small stuff may be left to reproduce the stand. The New England and Canadian lands from which we are getting our pulp are producing four times as much material to the acre as the forest.

It is said that it takes 30 acres of forest to print one edition of a great metropolitan newspaper. This may be true of the Canadian forests. But one acre of the dense Northwest forest would probably serve for an edition of the greatest newspaper in the country.

J. A. Cousins are about the same age it is quite proper to address a letter "Dear Mary" or "Dear John."

If the party to whom the letter is addressed is considerably older than the writer, it is better to say "Dear Cousin Viola" or "Dear Cousin Harry."

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SPEAKERS APPEAR AT CITY CHURCHES

As part of the program outlined for this week by the Anti-Saloon League of the state in which 25 meetings in different parts of the county are to be held, different speakers of this organization gave strong addresses in several churches of the city yesterday.

R. P. Hutton, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, gave an address at the morning services at the Federated church. He also spoke in the evening at the First Christian church. From personal knowledge of the planning and hard work that had gone into the campaign for the amendment of the prohibition amendment, he gave a brief resume of the way it had been passed by the legislature last evening. He outlined the plans for education and Americanization made by the league for the future.

"It has been decided by experts that Rhode Island and Wisconsin, who are out of the running when lining up the states for prohibition, but the impossible had been performed, by careful planning and much hard work," said Mr. Hutton.

Shows Sentiment at Capital

He outlined the sentiment which was prevalent at the capital during the time of the bringing up the amendment, and the crop of strong speakers who were on hand to give it an impetus when it was brought up. He detailed the way the prohibition leaders declined to wade into an argument on the bill, and presented it for a vote, without discussion.

The speaker outlined the policy of the league for the next few months as one of education and Americanization. He said they were going into the farming communities and spending in the schools and especially to the foreign population, and were in that way reaching about 4000 people a week. Another phase of the movement as presented by Mr. Hutton was that there was undeniable evidence presented at Washington that much of the hard interest and business spirit originated and thrived by the liquor interests.

Dry Law Fee of I. W. W.

The greatest loss to the I. W. W. and their agitators, as stated by him, was the passage of a strong prohibition law, and its energetic enforcement.

"To so much public sentiment that strong bill would be put through the legislature next winter, defining an intoxicating beverage as one that ample provision is being made for the enforcement of the national law, is the aim of the league," he said.

"America is not a quitter, and we must finish the job," said Mr. Hutton in closing his strong argument toward cooperation in his work, which he said was being done by the I. W. W. and the National Chautauk.

He said that the I. W. W. and their agitators, as stated by him, was the passage of a strong prohibition law, and its energetic enforcement.

"To so much public sentiment that strong bill would be put through the legislature next winter, defining an intoxicating beverage as one that ample provision is being made for the enforcement of the national law, is the aim of the league," he said.

Mr. Hutton is a former newspaper and publicity manager in many fields of work, and from a long and varied experience has a fund of entertainment that the people of the state are to knowledge to draw upon.

W. C. Osborne, who spoke at the Baptist church is a business man, formerly manager of a large construction corporation, at the First Lutheran church B. N. Hicks, Milwaukee, was the speaker.

Others Spoke Here

At the United Brethren church an address was made last evening by D. F. Johnson, who is in charge of this special unit of workers.

Among other speakers who did not appear at Janesville, is C. M. Hoechlin, an automobile salesman, and J. C. Bartholomew, former assemblymen of the state.

It shows the varied personnel which makes up the speakers connected with the league.

Mr. Hutton spoke of the valuable service of the one thousand business men of the state making up the Law Enforcement League, who were resolved to stand back of the Anti-Saloon league to see that the constitution of the United States was enforced.

One matter especially emphasized by Mr. Hutton and his associates was that the voters of the state, are to vote on a state law next spring. "This is the bill which removes the restrictions on the sale of liquor, and defines an intoxicating beverage as having the alcohol content of the present beer," he explained. He urged that the voter familiarize himself with the terms of the bill and vote its repeal so that an adequate law could be passed at the session of the legislature next winter.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: This is a problem that concerns not only myself, but every other male and female. The letters in your column would indicate—that is the meeting of the opposite sex.

I am 43 and would like to meet a lady about 35, who would enjoy going to the theater, etc. But this is not so easy.

I have read your advice to go to church, but after one has worked all week, it seems good to pick up a book or current magazine and read on Sunday. Also, suggesting to a friend that I have a roving disposition would get me too much publicity, so to speak.

I would be pleased could you suggest some other way.

PERPLEXED.

If you keep your eyes open, surely you can find some young lady answering your description. But there are girls world over who are not easy to find, who would accept an invitation to go to the theater and who would enjoy your company. You will find that many working girls are well read, have keen intellects and are splendid company.

The Y. W. C. A. in various cities is doing a great deal to help the problem along, holding open house on Sunday afternoon. The young men and women of the city are invited to the little social gathering and are there introduced.

Such a place is splendid and will eventually adopt a plan.

You ask too much when you want me to suggest a new and pleasing way for you to meet a young woman of your fancy. I have advised to the best of my ability in mentioning churches and friends as mediums of introduction.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a senior in high school and I am in

EVERYDAY HELPS

BY GRANDMOTHER WELLS

Almost as important as milk in the very small child's diet are other foods which belong in the same group. These are meat, fish, poultry, eggs, and meat substitutes.

It is a good plan to alternate between an egg and about two ounces of meat or fish for dinner. If there is any reason for omitting meat at the table, the meat can be substituted, but a suitable food should take its place—preferably an extra amount of milk or eggs.

When meat is prepared for children it should be broiled or roasted, as it is a tender meat, and stewed for a long time. It is especially bad for young children to be given meat being broiled. If it is too tough, dried meat should not be given to very young children. This is because it is apt to become overcooked and tough on the outside, and so made indigestible to the child who will not chew it thoroughly.

Stewed meat, from mutton and veal, is also splendid, and offers a wide variety of dishes. They can be made from the least expensive cuts of meat, by stewing for a long time. Any vegetables may be added to such as rice, barley, macaroni, or potatoes.

Chicken or turkey can be used to give variety to a child's diet and are especially palatable when stewed and served with rice. If roast chicken is used, select for the child only pieces which are tender. Do not give only seasoned stuffing, or rich gravy.

Almost any fish is appropriate to include in the menu. Boiled or stewed fish may be used as a change from fresh fish and oysters made into soups.

Eggs are especially useful for children, but care must be taken in their preparation not to overcook them.

Perhaps the most satisfactory way to cook eggs is to poach them. This is done in the following way: Bring a saucepan of water to the boiling point, then drop the eggs into it, remove the eggs from the fire, cover closely, and allow the eggs to stay in the water for about seven minutes before serving them.

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

Since Athena's masked ball I have not dared write in my diary. There are things which can gain too much weight if put into words. The mere speaking or writing of them crystallizes them into definite form. And perhaps they are better left unspoken.

Yet to shirk the depths and rapids of life, paddling about in the safe,

At Athena's ball I was sitting out lady. But some day, mark me, you'll

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writers of letters of general interest are invited to print their names and addresses. All letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

The one medicine, food and beverage of which a child, or any adult, can live on, is plain cold water.

It would be better to "decide yourself to some one else" because you will be happier and have less time to suffer because you cannot have the young man of your choice. Your experience is common to girls of your age. You have built up about the young man and do not realize that you are in love with your own dreams.

I cannot encourage you to think that he will come back to you if you go with some one else. He may and he may not. Try to forget him and pick out good qualities that exist in your other friends.

"Bob": Your two good letters were received. Both were worthy of space in the column, but owing to the large number of letters which come in every day to be answered, I am not able to print what you have written.

My statement about truthfulness did not have the significance which you gave it. I have not felt for a minute that you told an untruth. Do not worry about my judgment of you. It is favorable.

I would be very much to answer you personally, and if you will send me your address I will write to you at once.

It is because of your love for your mother and your need of her now that I would like to hear from you again. You help her in every way I can. Your letter will help me too, because they are so full of clean, sound, boyish qualities.

Devil's Own

A Romance of the Backhuwa War
BY RANDALL PARISH
Author of
"Contraband," "Ships of the Irish Brigade," "When Wilderness Was King," etc.

Copyrighted A. C. McClure & Co.

"By heaven, Kirby, I'll do it!" he blurted out. "You can't bluff me on the hand I've got. Give me a sheet of paper somebody—yes, that will do."

He scrawled a half-dozen lines, fairly digging the pen into the sheet, in his too-eagerness, and then signed the document, flinging the paper across toward Kirby.

"There, you bloodsucker," he cried.

The imperturbable gambler read it over slowly, carefully deciphering each word, his thin lips tightly compressed.

"You might add the words 'This includes every chattel slave legally belonging to me,'" he said grimly.

"That is practically what I did say."

"Then you can certainly have no objection to putting it in the exact words I choose, Kirby. I intend to have it in, and I can't do it if I win, and I know the law."

Beaucaire angrily wrote in the required extra line.

"Now what?" he asked.

"Let McAfee there sign it as a witness, and then toss it over into the table." Nice little pot gentlemen—the judge must hold some cards to take a chance like that," the words uttered with a sneer. "Four aces at least, or maybe he has had the luck to pick a straight flush."

Beaucaire's face reddened, and his eyes grew hard.

"That's all my business," he said tersely. "Sign it, McAfee, and I'll call this moving cockerel. You young fool. I played poker before you were born. There now, Kirby, I've covered your bet."

"Perhaps you would prefer to raise it?"

"You hel-hound—no! That is my limit, and you know it. Don't draw now; do any more bluffing. Show your hand—I've called you."

Kirby sat absolutely motionless, his cards lying face down upon the table, the white fingers of one hand resting lightly upon them, the other arm concealed.

No, never once had he moved his gaze from Beaucaire's face, and his expression did not change, except for the almost insulting sneer on his lips. The silence was profound, the deeply interested men leaning forward, even holding their breath in intense eagerness.

Each realized that a fortune lay in the table: knew that the old judge had many stakes, his all on the value of those five unseen cards gripped in his fingers. Again as though to bolster up his shaken courage, he stared at the face of each, then lifted his bloodshot eyes to the impulsive face opposite.

"Beaucaire drew two cards,"

"whispered an excited voice near me."

"Hell, Sir did Kirby," replied another. "They're both of 'em old hands."

The sharp exhaust of a distant steam pipe below punctuated the silence, and several glanced about apprehensively. As this noise ceased Beaucaire lost all control over his nerves.

"Come on, play your hand," he demanded, "or I'll throw my cards in your face."

The insinuating sneer on Kirby's lips changed into the semblance of a smile. Slowly, deliberately, he once glanced down at his face, his cards, he turned them up one by one with white fingers, his challenging eyes on the judge; but the others saw what was revealed—a ten-spot, a knave, a queen, a king and an ace.

"A straight flush!" someone yelled excitedly. "D—d I ever saw one before!"

For an instant Beaucaire never moved, never uttered a sound. He seemed to doubt the evidence of his own eyes, and to have lost the power of speech. Then from nerveless hands his own cards fell face downward, still unrevealed, upon the table. The next moment he was on his feet, the chair in which he had been seated, flung crashing behind him on the floor.

"You thief!" he roared. "You dirty low-down thief; I held four aces—

UNDEFEATED OHIO LOOKS GOOD TO TAKE CONFERENCE TITLE

Chicago, Nov. 10.—The undefeated Ohio State eleven, with the scalps of Michigan and Purdue dangling from its belt, since Saturday's notch nearer the big football championship with Illinois trailing in second place and Chicago pulling up in third. Wisconsin and Iowa, with two victories out of three games to their credit, are tied for fourth place. Illinois has won four of its five games while Chicago has won three out of four.

Victories over Purdue in a 20 to 0 game last Saturday, the Ohioans will face their crucial games next Saturday and a week later, meeting Wisconsin and Illinois, respectively, in games which promise to be the most desperately fought of the season.

Harley to the Rescue.

The Ohioans were given a real scare by Purdue on Saturday and only the prowess of Capt. Chick Harley enabled them to romp away with the game. Harley had been kept on the side-lines to avoid a possible injury which probably would have kept him out of the Wisconsin game, but was called into the contest at the start of the second period.

While last week's games were without startling upsets, the 10 to 6 victory of Illinois over Minnesota was regarded as a surprise. Beaten in three periods of the game, Illinois staged a fighting rally in the fourth.

Chicago's 13 to 0 triumph over Michigan in the renewal of gridiron rivalry between these historic foes was gained through the ability of the Maroons to use successfully the forward pass.

The smooth working Iowa eleven gave Northwestern its fourth straight defeat, winning 14 to 7. The Hawkeyes clash with Chicago next Saturday and the outcome of this contest will determine the rank the Iowans will be given in the "big ten" championship race. It will be the first time Iowa and Chicago have met for several years.

Enjoy Profitable Season.

Football throughout the western conference is enjoying a remarkable comeback both financially and in playing quality, from the wartime setback given the game a year ago. Reports received Sunday night show the prosperity of the game. The receipts of the Michigan-Chicago combat on Saturday will approximate $55,000, the attendance being close to the 25,000 mark.

The Michigan-Ohio contest drew an attendance in the neighborhood of 25,000, while the Chicago-Illinois 22,000. The Northwestern-Wisconsin contest two weeks ago drew nearly 6,000 more spectators than any game in Northwestern's history.

ILLINI WALK OVER MINNESOTANS, 10-6

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 10.—It was a sad homecoming day at the University of Minnesota Saturday. The Fletcher brothers—Robert and Ralph of Morris, Ill.—were the heroes of an Illinois victory Saturday, 10 to 6.

The Minnesota team went down to defeat in the fourth quarter of what is considered one of the best played games seen on Northrup field in many years.

Arnold Oss, Minnesota's star half-back and the hero of the day, scored the only Gopher touchdown in the third quarter by some sensational open field running. Oss, in this quarter, made one run from his own 40 yard line to Illinois' 33 yard line.

A minute later he broke loose to the 25 yard line, and after the other backfield men had carried the ball to the 12 yard line, Oss again got away, shooting off tackle in another spectacular dash for a touchdown.

It was that Minnesota touchdown that brought defeat to the Maroon and Gold.

Stars Shaping Up for Wisconsin

BUCKEYES WASH BOILERMAKERS, 20-0

Columbus, Nov. 10.—On a slippery field under ideal football atmosphere, the Buckeyes hopefuls demonstrated their prowess by annexing the first big game on Ohio field this year from Purdue, 20 to 0. The Boilermakers forced the Ohio team to play its best, showing a stiff opposition at all times and often penetrating the Ohio line for good gains.

Purdue won on the offensive most of the first half, but was not able to get dangerously near the Ohio goal. Ohio State gained largely through the stellar work of Fullback Willard Koeher and Brightman shot down the field until they reached the opponent's one-yard line. Then Koeher shot through center for a touchdown, bucking nested several gains of 10 and fifteen yards. Huffine was the star of the Purdue offense.

Capt. "Chic" Harley entered the game shortly after the opening of the second period with Ohio State in possession of the ball in midfield. Harley kicked in an exchange of punts and gained ground, after which he rambled thirty yards around Purdue's right end for the only score of the first half.

Ohio State—20.

Twice the Purple held the Hawkeyes on the one-yard line. A time the ball was held by the Hawkeyes and the ball could be counted in inches.

Iowa scored its first touchdown in the opening period and again in the third, and each time only put renewed fighting spirit into the Northwestern bunch. The scoring of the game was as follows:
